BETTER FIGHT THAN STARVE.

Old ex-Governor Wait of Colorado told the silver convention that if Wall street continued to saddle bankrupts and ruin on the country the West would resent the injustice if it was obliged to take up arms. This is what conservative people call incendiary talk, but the times are fast drifting into a state of financial stringency when men will take the field before they will see their families starve.

In a country of the boundless resources of America, teeming with life and industry, and mantled with fields of wheat, corn, cotton and tobacco, covering thousands of square miles, there is but one thing that will cause hard times. It is when the shylecks of Europe buy up law makers and by purchased legislation double our bonded debt, reduce the price of everything we produce, and crush out our industries by demonetizing half our circulating medium.

The producers of America cannot starve themselves to death to enrich the bankers of the old world who have of late years managed our finances from London and Berlin. If this oppression is to continue the end will be when the West and South rise and fight for their bread and butter.

If the people of the East propose to side with the allies of the conspirators across the sea, then the West must either rise and assert itself or be wiped out commercially from the face of the earth.

The tidal wave of November 7, 1892, threw up on the shore of the country the following list of national benefite, viz.: a President who deems his entire allegiance due to the eleven secession States; a vice-President who was a Knight of the Golden Circle and the political associate of Altgeld, governor of Illinois; a governor of Illinois beating Benedict Arnold in the infamy of his treachery to the country; a secretary of state who was a traitor to his party for the sake of office. All should be in uniform, guarding the turn-stiles at the World's Fair.—Mark Boruck in Spirit of the Times.

It is a grave error on the part of the friends of silver to suppose that the repeal of the Sherman act restores the acts which is repealed. Section 12 of the United States says: Whenever an act is repealed which repealed a former act, such former act shall not be repealed unless it shall be expressly so provided.

The unconditional repeal of the bullion purchase law would leave silver totally demonetized, and would not, as some people imagine, restore the Bland act.

Ned Marshall, formerly Attorney-General for California, who died in San Francisco on Sunday, was one of the brightest men whom the legal profession on this Coast has known. As a stump orator he was long without a peer in the State. Political entanglements and animosities blighted his later life, but all old Californians will remember to the last versatile, brilliant, companionable old Ned Marshall.

The South owes a heavy obligation to the silver States. It was saved from an odious "force bill" by the votes of the silver State Senators. Will the South now repudiate its obligations by assisting in the destruction of the prosperity of the great West?

Think of a dinner in New York that cost $100 a plate; you 50 cent wheat and 5-cent cotton raisers. And these are the people who tell the laboring people they live too extravagantly!

The Midwinter Fair at San Francisco is being pushed ahead, but the cost of the buildings is now bothering the projectors. We hope to see the Fair a success and that Nevada will make a proper exhibit.

Eastern papers express alarm at the activity of the friends of bimetalism. Their alarm will give place to surprise when the Western cyclone strikes Washington.

Stanford's successor is to be appointed next week and DeYoung is said to be the man.
